The Covington-Rhode Senior Prize in Art at The University of New Mexico recognizes the outstanding achievement of our undergraduate art students during their senior year, to promote professionalism and excellence in the visual arts, and motivates and encourages all art students to achieve their fullest potential throughout their years in the program. As a competitive award, the competition will be open to graduating seniors (undergraduates) earning a degree in the Art Department who have a studio practice and will give them experience exhibiting their artwork and participating in a professional evaluation. The recipient(s) will be recognized at the College of Fine Arts spring convocation.

The Award

The Covington-Rhode Senior Prize will be awarded to the individual senior artist or artists of superior promise and demonstrable ability.

Selection of Student Participants & Prize Winners

The UNM Art faculty will review and score the online applications and score each submission. All students will be considered equally, regardless of specialization or major. The faculty will exercise their decision based on material evidence in the application, as well as a creative activity. Criteria employed in selecting nominees are creativity, craftsmanship, and potential for professional development.

The students with the most votes will move on to the next level of the selection process, which will be judged by the Covington-Rhode Prize Jury Committee. The committee will be comprised of five professors in art (will rotate annually), one of whom teaches the Studio Art Capstone Class. Students will be notified of their status in April.

The selected finalists will be notified and will be asked to make a formal presentation of their original work in a one-week exhibition for review in late April/ early May at the John Sommers Gallery. The students will draw for space and install their own portion of the exhibition. On the exhibition's opening day, the Covington-Rhode Award winner(s). The winner or winners will be honored in an awards ceremony at the exhibition, as well as at the CFA Spring Convocation.
