course offerings

The Art Department offers BFA, BA and BAIA undergraduate degrees in Studio Art, the BA and a Post Baccalaureate Licensure in Art Education and a BA in Art History. The MFA degree is offered in Studio; an MA can be pursued in Art Education; and the MA and PhD degrees are possible in Art History. In all of the work leading to these degrees, the importance of the arts as communication, in the past, the present and the future, is pivotal. This belief is the keystone of our programs, and it is the foundation for our primary goal, which is to expose students to the richness of art through a wide range of new and traditional media. We also seek to develop critical thought in our classes, and the practice and methods for understanding the teaching of the arts and the history of art.

The Department is dedicated to providing the best education possible no matter what degree a student might be pursuing. The Department is dedicated to benefiting UNM, the city of Albuquerque, the state of New Mexico, as well as national, and international communities. To achieve these aims, the Department is committed to maintaining a world-class faculty that is actively engaged in creative art, art education, and art history.

(3 credits) (Formerly ARTH 101) This course is geared toward non-majors to build visual literacy skills and introduce the discipline of art history. Through lectures examining works of art and visual culture from diverse global contexts, this course will investigate several themes and questions: What is art and who gets to define it? How and why does art or visual culture exist? How does art function in specific cultural and historical contexts? How do we understand what art means? What tools do we need to understand and analyze the diverse visual materials in our lives and around the world? How do art historians contextualize and discuss art and visual culture in temporal and social terms? Students should understand that this class is not about validating subjective likes or dislikes, or even differentiating between "good" versus "bad" art, but instead is designed to teach the basic tools and practices for analyzing the visual images that permeate our lives. Through both course lectures and first-hand engagements with works of art and visual culture, students will learn how to evaluate evidence and visual information, situate works of art in cultural and historic contexts, and apply basic art historical methods of visual analysis. The lectures and assignments in this class will enable students to look at, write about, and discuss works of art in a critical and thoughtful manner beyond personal preferences. This course meets the requirements for the fine arts credit under the NMHED general education guidelines.

(3 credits) (Formerly ARTH 201) This survey course explores the art and architecture of ancient pre-historic cultures through the end of the fourteenth century. Focused on art from diverse global contexts, this course will provide insights into the artworks of global cultures in order to provide alternate views of art and history. Emphasis will be placed on the relationship of artworks to political, social, spiritual, intellectual, and cultural movements that affect and are affected by their creation and development. Through both course lectures and first-hand engagements with works of art and visual culture, students will learn how to evaluate evidence and visual information, situate works of art in cultural and historic contexts, and apply basic art historical methods of visual analysis. 9:30-10:45

(3 credits) This course is an introduction to the diverse artistic traditions of the Southwest, with heavy emphasis on the art history of New Mexico. Starting with the art and architecture of ancestral Pueblo peoples, we will examine the visual cultures of Indo-Hispano/Spanish Colonial, Euro-American, and several Native communities, from the archaeological past to the present. By examining textiles, ceramics, architecture, painting, photography, and other art forms, students will learn how the unique cultural and historical contexts of New Mexico shape artistic production, and learn critical thinking skills and art historical methodologies that enable us to understand the cause and effect relationships between works of art and the socio-historic circumstances of their production. Works of art and visual culture are always communicative and political, especially when they claim not to be, so a central theme of this class is investigating the roles that arts fulfill both within specific communities as well as the ways that art and visual culture has been impacted by intercultural contact and colonial conflict. By the end of the course, students will be able to talk about the wide variety of arts of the Southwest in a critical, analytical manner, and will demonstrate an understanding of the relationships between visuality and socio-historic contexts.

(3 credits) Offered with ARTH 579. This class will explore the rise of mass media and popular culture, against which the fine arts attempted to defend itself or to embrace and appropriate; also, we will explore the consuming questions around Indigenous people, immigration, migration, and citizenship as defined by Jim Crow. We will track the development and rise of feature films; the embrace of photography as a fine art but also for its documentary potential to tell complex narratives of impoverishment. We will consider the impact of the International Labor Organization; the rise of cosmopolitanism and the artists who worked and moved fluidly between Mexico, Europe, and the United States. Ultimately, the underlying thread of this class will register how the fine and popular arts made visible the expansion of the United States empire in Cuba, the Philippines, Puerto Rico, Alaska, Guam, and Hawai'i as well as the consequences of expansion for ideologies of gender, race, ethnicity, and ability.

CTRART 1020

(3 credits) Offered with ARTH 506, ANTH 403 and 503. This course is the second half of a two-semester survey of historic and "traditional" Native American/First Nations art of North America. In this semester, we will examine a wide range of arts and architecture from the Plains, Plateau, Great Basin, and Southwest regions, from the archaeological past to the present. (The first semester, Native American Art I, deals with the Eastern Woodlands, Great Lakes, Prairie, Arctic and Sub-arctic, Northwest Coast, and California.) Certain themes will run throughout the course: discussions of indigenous epistemologies and aesthetic systems, the meanings and functions of art in Native societies, the limits of extant art historical and other scholarly approaches to Native visual cultures, and the myriad issues arising from intercultural contact and colonial conflict.

(Students do not have to take Native American Art History I and II in order, and may take only one of the two courses since they are not cumulative and have different cultural and geographic subject matter. Likewise, please note that this course does not deal extensively with "contemporary" works of art, which are the focus of Art History 415/515, "Modern and Contemporary Native American Art", as well as other topics courses on contemporary Native arts.)

This course offers an exploration of Indigenous moving images and soundscapes as an art form that is centered in research, land justice and heritage language revitalization. Within the context of Native art history, the course examines an overview of abstraction, experimental filmmaking, and critical Indigenous studies in relation to other disciplines and the arts. Through reading, archival alterations, sound exploration, film screenings and visiting artists we will survey approaches to visual and sonic storytelling. Opportunities to make special projects is supported by a series of in class workshops that offer research methodologies and techniques to assist students in creating short films and sound pieces as alternative forms of creative scholarship. Our key concepts include settler colonialism, decolonization, land, imagination, and memory.

CTRART 1019

(3 credits) Offered with ARTH 549. This course will focus on the history and art of the Iberian Peninsula, or Spain, from the late medieval and early renaissance periods through the mid nineteenth century. The chronological frame of the course will thus be the early modern period, ca. 1500–1850. Familiarizing ourselves with the shifting political, cultural, and social environment of the peninsula will help us understand the arts that were produced and their significance, both, then and now. As an introduction, we will begin by briefly looking at art in Spain before 1500, i.e. from prehistory and the ancient period to the end of Roman imperial rule through the entry of Islam into the region. We will then devote the rest of the class to closely examining art production following the Christian Reconquest in the renaissance and baroque periods, the latter era considered to be the apogee of Spanish cultural development, or “Golden Age,” which gave birth to artists, such as, El Greco, Diego Velázquez, Jusepe de Ribera, Bartolomé Esteban Murillo, and Francisco Goya y Lucientes. We will also look at Spain’s American territories during this period and consider the role of colonialism in shaping imperial Spain’s identity and development during the long early modern period. Course requirements will include: weekly readings, 2 papers, and 4 take-home exams.

Sec 002 CRN 58661	Root	TR	9:30-12:15	ART 304

What is Art & Ecology? Why does Art & Ecology matter for our time? Students will explore these and other related questions through readings, discussions, and projects. In science, ecology refers to the study of relations among living beings (humans included), and with the surrounding environments. In this course, we will consider a more expansive view of ecology—one in which different modes of inquiries, including the aesthetic, scientific, cultural, social, economic and the political are brought together to help us better understand the complexities of our precarious time. This course is designed to introduce Art & Ecology as a research-based interdisciplinary creative practice to students coming from diverse academic disciplines, including but not limited to art, science, humanities, planning, and public policy.

Sec: 001 CRN: 80938	Stine	F	11:00-5:00	ART 245/344
---------------------	-------	---	------------	-------------

Outdoor studio is a field study course offered by the Painting and Drawing area. In this course, we will be working on site, painting en plein-air, or “out in the air”. throughout Albuquerque and through distinct regions of New Mexico within a 2 hour drive. The class gives students the opportunity to experience and to explore their relationship to the landscape and environments of this specific region of New Mexico-- basically, our current (direct and indirect) backyards. While we will be working with traditional drawing and painting materials, and often working from observation, this course is open to students from all studio arts backgrounds and integration of your preferred media and approach is welcomed. Sites, both urban and natural, are visited and worked in regardless of weather extremes. Students will be expected to have reliable transportation and appropriate outdoor gear, and carry themselves responsibly. There is a camping component to the course and experience camping and hiking is strongly encouraged. Students will have access to various traditional plein air set ups, and will also be building their own pochade boxes, easels and other traveling studio accoutrement. Building technical skills and approaches to painting plein air, addressing formal and conceptual issues, as well as in depth critiques and discussions will happen in the field on site. Restriction: permission of instructor.

(3 credits) Offered with ARTS 549. What does it mean to design nature, and how do artists and designers fit into the process of making machines from biology? In this studio course students explore shared and new territory between synthetic biology, art and design. Students will gain a basic background in some of the tools and techniques of bio art and design through hands-on experiments, cross-disciplinary collaboration and individual and group project development. Must also enroll in ARTS 448.001 Bio Art and Design Lecture.

(3 credits) Offered with ARTS 552, BIOL 402/502, CRP 470/570, LA 511, SUST 402. During semester, we will partner with Tewa Women United and Communities for Clean Water to conduct place-based, community research regarding the numerous toxic sites remaining on the unceded lands of Tewa Peoples surrounding Los Alamos National Laboratory (LANL). Stemming from the Healing Sacred Relations Toxic Site Tour, led by Elder Kathy Sanchez of Tewa Women United, we will engage in a more in-depth/extended tour of the area to learn about the issues, the history and ongoing realities of environmental injustice, and hear stories from and work with front-line community members. Through semester-long guidance, students will create a culturally responsive, values-based, interactive, storymap of the toxic sites as a deliverable to our partners. In addition, we will create a public exhibition to share our research and artwork with the wider community.

Students from all backgrounds and disciplines are encouraged to join this class. Diversity and needs-based scholarships are available. Students must attend the informational meeting or meet one-on-one with faculty to register for these courses.

Collaborative Lithography
Creightney T 2:00-4:45 TAMARIND 126

(3 credits) This studio course is designed to simulate the professional artist-printer relationship in the collaborative printmaking workshop. Students will be expected to explore their ideas and develop imagery in the context of the unique possibilities of the medium of lithography. Artist participants, selected from any major or discipline, will collaborate with student printers at Tamarind. No technical knowledge of lithography is necessary, but artists should expect to spend several hours in the workshop outside of the scheduled class time. Artists will work in close cooperation with different Tamarind printers on 4 projects. Enrollment is limited to five students. Preference will be given to students who have not taken the course previously. If interested please submit a brief artist statement and pdf of 10 images to Brandon Gunn (gunnb@unm.edu) and Karsten Creightney (kcc1@unm.edu), with the subject "Tamarind Collaborative Class" Please include your banner ID number.
